Good afternoon Joe –

I was asked by one of our HLC colleagues to pass along the below campus safety series that was initiated by our campus communications team, led by Steve Carr. To date they have thoughtfully developed and published 9 stories that reflect the different dimensions of campus safety at UNM and detail our efforts across the institution in a relatable way. Another story on homelessness related campus safety concerns is scheduled to be published to the UNM Newsroom later today.

ASUNM awarded funds for new campus safety escort program

By Carly Bowling © April 20, 2023

Students at The University of New Mexico are working to improve safety on campus with a new student escort program. The Associated Students at The University of New Mexico (ASUNM) will receive $100,000 from the New Mexico State Legislature to purchase...

'The Grey Area' training aims to make consent clear for students

By Carly Bowling © April 17, 2023

Mandatory training may have a certain tone to it, but the LoboRESPECT Advocacy Center is working to distinguish the sexual assault prevention trainings the organization offers, like The Grey Area, as programs that initiate real conversations and help...

Not Quite 73 Questions with Sgt. Burk

By Savannah Peat © April 10, 2023

You may have seen a slew of celebrities give the world a closer look at their lives off the big screen, in Vogue's 73 Questions series. While it's not Zendaya, Zac Efron, or Selena Gomez, UNM Communications is taking the fun to a local UNM...

From spinning records to on-the-record: UNMPD's Police Chief

By Savannah Peat © March 14, 2023

It's been nearly nine years since current UNM Police Department Chief Joseph Silva began serving Lobos on campus. While the safety and security issues facing the campus have changed across nearly a decade, the commitment from UNMPD remains...

UNM students advocate for sexual assault victim legislation

By Savannah Peat © March 03, 2023

UNM's Women's Resource Center (WRC) is pushing for campus safety not just on main campus, but across the state, at all schools. Their latest initiative is supporting and amplifying students in their lobbying efforts for Senate Bill 82. This bill is...

Campus safety through architecture, landscape architecture and urban design

By Carly Bowling © February 26, 2023

The design of indoor and outdoor spaces has the power to shape not just how we use an area, but also how we feel about it. Design can help inform whether someone wants to meet friends or move through an area quickly. It can even discourage crime. Crime...

UNM Continuing Education & Jackson Wink partnership packs a punch

By Savannah Peat © February 07, 2023

Beyond a realm of traditional college courses, the University of New Mexico has options which could require dancing shoes, a paintbrush, or some boxing gloves. UNM's Continuing Education has offered unique classes for students, staff and faculty for...

Campus collaboration to debut closed door resources

By Savannah Peat © February 03, 2023

Help can come from unexpected places. It's a fact that a new partnership at The University of New Mexico is taking to heart. The Women's Resource Center, (WRC) Dean of Students Office (DOSO) and the Office of Compliance, Ethics & Equal Opportunity...

Campus Safety: Lobos Come First

By Steve Carr © January 31, 2023

Today, University Communication and Marketing begins a new series titled, Campus Safety: Lobos Come First. The series will run weekly over the course of the next 2-3 months. The goal of the series is to educate the UNM community regarding current and...
